—If the house of Rothschild says there must be no European war, there will be none. It is a curious and suggestive spectacle—all the armies of Christendom waiting the word of a Jew to advance or to lay down their arms.

—DIED—In Carson City, Feb. 8, 1887, after a protracted illness, Mrs. Dora Spencer, aged 27 years, 9 months and 23 days.

The deceased lady was a daughter of Mr. Henry Vansickle, was born and raised in Carson Valley, and esteemed by all who knew her from infancy till death. Deceased leaves one child.

—Mall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer imparts a fine gloss and freshness to the hair, and is highly recommended by physicians, clergymen, and scientists, as a preparation accomplishing wonderful results. It is a certain remedy for removing dandruff, making the scalp white and clean, and restoring gray hair to its youthful color.

—It cost Mrs. Logan over $30 to pay for telegrams of condolence sent to her. This reminds us that the sorrow felt by our veterans here for Mrs. Logan's bereavement has thus far called forth nothing more substantial than tears. Now although the tears of San Francisco veterans are, of course, quite precious, they are not legal tender.—Daily Report.

The Southwestern Road.

The bill granting a franchise to a road through Southern Nevada has occasioned a good deal of fighting in the House. Every effort was made to obstruct it, but yesterday the friends of the measure made such a clear showing of its advantages that it passed with but three dissenting votes. Pike and Craig made strong arguments for the bill. It is a measure which in time will prove of great benefit to this State.

Rice fought for the railroad interests of Lincoln county, and won at a canter.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Journal:—The subject of water is being discussed. How to gain a supply is a problem that should be solved if possible. With your permission I will make the following suggestions: That the Legislature make a small appropriation to plant chapparrel or some other brush on some of the highest mountains, where the snow lies deep and late. Should it grow, it would spread all over the hills, and it would keep the drifting snow and hold it until late and the sun gets high. The only reason the mountains are bare is from forest fires; I notice that the fires have destroyed the cottonwood. In the Fall the leaves fall off, and fire gets in and destroys the young timber for long distances.

Anything that will catch the drifting snow, and hold it until late in the season, will accomplish much good. The great drawback is, the water gives out before the crops are matured. Could we get the mountains covered with some undergrowth timber it would do as much good as all the artesian water obtainable. T. J. BELL

THE GREAT SOUTHERN PACIFIC SYSTEM.

Eli Perkins Lets out a Little Eloquent Truth About It.

There is a good deal of talk in the New York newspapers about the Southern Pacific, formerly called the Central Pacific R. R. In these discussions the names of Senator Stanford, Charles Crocker and C. P. Huntington are often mentioned.

Now what is the Southern Pacific Railroad and who are these gentlemen?

The Southern Pacific system consists principally of three great prongs radiating from San Francisco. One runs South to Los Angeles and Yuma, where it connects with the great Santa Fe system, and then on to El Paso and New Orleans. The other runs East to Sacramento and Ogden, where it clasps hands with the Union Pacific, and the third prong runs North (or will reach there in a few months) to Portland, Oregon, where it shakes hands with the Northern Pacific system. These roads are about six thousand miles long.

Who made them?
Leland Stanford, Charles Crocker and C. P. Huntington.

Those men have added a thousand million dollars to the value of the Republic. They have turned the desert of Southern California into gardens. They have brought New York within six days of San Francisco. They have peopled a great empire on the Pacific which now sends wheat, fruit and wine all over the earth.

Have these three men done any good to the Republic?

When the great East was crying for a railroad across the Continent—when Congress was making appropriations and the newspapers were begging such men as Vanderbilt and Astor to put their money and brains into the gigantic scheme—then these three men, young and full of fire and patriotism, rolled up their sleeves and commenced building Westward. Alone they fought the fight. The Republic looked on amazed and applauded them. It said: "See what three of our citizens are doing!" The rich East held out its hands. It beckoned on. They toiled on—these three men did. They gave their brains to it. They put up every dollar they could raise or borrow. By and by they completed the work. They alone met the rich and populous East in the middle of the Continent. They met us half way. Then the Republic celebrated. Every man in the nation said: "All hail Stanford, Crocker and Huntington!"

The venture in building the road was great. These men hazarded all they had—health and money. Pluck and luck brought success—and now, after augmenting the wealth of the nation more than a thousand millions, they saved for themselves a simple titling—perhaps $100,000,000. They have given the Republic ten dollars to where the Republic has given them one. Are they not good citizens? Who has done better? Should we not cherish them? Suppose they have risked all, and, by indomitable pluck, have made the nation a thousand million wealthier, and saved a hundred million for themselves. Is it too much?

The Southern Pacific is splendidly managed by A. N. Towne, a bosom friend and confidential admirer of Stanford, Crocker and Huntington. They have all been courteous to Eastern journalists, and Eastern journalists should stand by the great system.—Eli Perkins' syndicate letter in Pittsburg Commercial.

The Weather Service.

There are two bills now pending in the Legislature which should pass. One is to provide for establishing a weather service in Nevada, and the other is to procure needed meteorological reports for the years 1885 and 1886. The proposed legislation on the subject of irrigation would have a solid foundation of information now, provided such a law as the first mentioned had been passed two years ago. The expense to be incurred is very moderate, while the advantages to be reaped by all the people of the State would be great and lasting.
